Free weights are the best tool available for building muscle size, strength, and power. And they do it faster than any other form of weight training. By using dumbbells, this whole process happens faster than with machines or even freeweight barbells, because you're forced to use a variety of stabilizer muscles that wouldn't get worked any other way – and almost all serious bodybuilders use free-weight barbells and dumbbells as an integral part of their workout routines. And it's easy to incorporate into your home gym with PowerBlocks. The 18-minute Home Training Dumbbell Blast You can do over 100 functional exercises with PowerBlock dumbbells combined with an adjustable bench. A training session of just under 20 minutes can be enough to build strength and size in just six weeks. Perform this workout twice a week, distributed to allow several days between workouts (e.g. Monday and Thursday, or Wednesday and Sunday). Dumbbell bench press Just like a regular bench press, with PowerBlock Dumbbells. Lift the dumbbells from the chest to a straight up position for a rope. Make 3 sets of 8-10 reps per set. Dumbbell substitute Bicep Curl While standing, use an arm and curl dumbbell upwards for a rope. Make a full set with that arm, then change arms. Make 2 sets in total for each arm of 8-12 reps per set. Incline Dumbbell Press For this - adjust your bench to a 45 Degree tilt, and raise from your chest straight up for a rope. Make 2 sets of 10-12 reps per set. One-Arm Side Laterals With one arm at your side, and your other arm holding the dumbbell, lift the dumbbell clean from your side until the arm is straight out for a rope. Use a weight low enough to prevent the arm from bending while lifting. After each set, arms switch. Makes 1-2 sets of 8-12 reps per set. One-Arm Dumbbell Row Lean over with one hand on your bench, and row dumbbell upwards with your other arm for a rope. With each arm, make 2-3 sets of 8-10 reps per set.
